Concept/Grammar rules	Applications
-----------------------	--------------

Fragment A in column 1 connects to fragment E in column 2 both contextually and grammatically as they combine together to make a meaningful sentence.

China's Alibaba, with its investment in Paytm Mall, is vying to compete in the Indian e-commerce space.

This makes A-E a valid combination.

Fragment B in column 1 seems to fit with D in column 2 grammatically but it would not make a contextually correct sentence.

The use of devise is incorrect. Devise is a verb which means a plan or to invent (a complex procedure, system, or mechanism) by careful thought. We need to replace 'devise' with 'device'.

Fragment C in column 1 seems to fit with F in column 2 contextually but it would not make a grammatically correct sentence.

Here the usage of the word-final is wrong. It should be replaced with finally. Final is an

the verb 'speeding'.

The given question suggests finding an appropriate match for each of the sentences and mark the correct option.
